Anabaptist Churches
in the Washington,
DC Metropolitan Area
and MCC

The Washington, DC Metropolitan Area

The area includes the District of Columbia and parts of Maryland (MD), Virginia (VA) and West Virginia (WV). The DC Metro Area is one of the most educated and affluent areas in the United States and also an area with dire poverty and related issues. It has a blend of urban and rural communities and its population is growing rapidly.

US Census statistics mention this area as the 9th most populated metropolitan region of the United States. Only New York City has a foreign-born population as diverse as Fairfax County in Northern Virginia which has residents coming from more than 100 countries. Approximately 45 percent of the county's population are racial and ethnic minorities and 39 percent may speak a language other than English at home.

Other cities and counties in this area share the same characteristics. The same diversity and dynamism are reflected in the makeup of Anabaptist churches (Brethren in Christ and Mennonite churches) of this area. Beyond their differences however, these churches are profoundly rooted in the Anabaptist culture and are devoted in the teaching and support of biblical principles of Love, Forgiveness and Peace and Justice.

Whenever visiting Washington, DC or its surrounding area, please visit these churches and enjoy the worship style and flavors offered by these various congregations. Without a doubt, you will indeed recognize that beyond their diversity, Anabaptist churches share ONE spirit.
